From Earth to the universe

How did we get from that small and still universe of antiquity to the conception of a vast, ever-changing universe? This book is about Galileo Galilei and other great people who pursued new and better answers, and ideas that changed the world and the way we think about our place in the cosmos.

One Big family

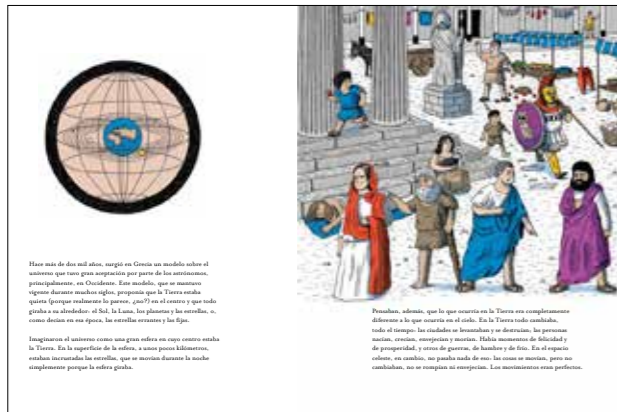

In exquisite prose, an epistemologist tells us of Charles Darwin's courage and how he helped us to understand who we are and where we come from. How he showed us that the world is more beautiful and interesting than we ever thought. How his ideas encourage us to think in original ways.

"This universe in constant change that we "see" when we turn our eyes to the sky is very different from that still, small and comfortable one that our ancestors saw and in whose center they thought they lived."

"At that time, many people found it hard to accept that life on Earth had changed so much, that all living beings were one big family and, especially, that humans had evolved from other animals."

Where Are Those Voices From?

Latin America is a huge and varied place. Its songs tell us about its people, their dances show us their joys and sorrows, its rhythms take us back to its roots... How long has Carnival been celebrated? What does “Mapuche” mean? What do slaves and candombe have to do with each other? How were the tango and the chacarera born?
